Dr. Yadro Ducic believes that facial plastic surgery should go undetected. "In my opinion, people should never know you had work done," he says. "It should be our little secret as to why you look so good."

The luxuriously appointed Center for Aesthetic Surgery in Colleyville welcomes patients with a warm Mediterranean décor of stucco and a red tile roof to convey a comfortable ambience and sophisticated Old World elegance. In doing so, it sets the backdrop for a beautiful patient experience from start to finish and conveys the doctor's appreciation for aesthetics on many levels. With a caring and friendly staff, Dr. Ducic notes that the main agenda for the practice is to "make everyone feel at home, like they are part of the family because that is what we are—a cohesive group united by the desire to help patients reach their goals."

With 12 years of experience giving him a wealth of knowledge, Dr. Ducic gives back to the younger generations by training residents from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, and is also a fellowship director for the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery. As well, he's also the vice chairman of the Department of Surgery at John Peter Smith Hospital where he treats trauma victims. "Helping others is my passion," he says. "There is nothing I enjoy more than teaching and treating patients."

THE CHOICE IS YOURS

When choosing a plastic surgeon, Dr. Ducic suggests relying on someone with a strong track record and years of experience. "I'm a PERFECTIONIST in all aspects of my life, and by extension, the same is true when it comes to my patients' faces." Having published over 100 articles and book chapters and having taught at numerous courses and universities, Dr. Ducic feels it is important to remain mindful of both proven techniques as well as those that are on the horizon. "I enjoy teaching because it keeps me on the leading edge of new technologies within the field. My goal is to seamlessly integrate traditional methods of treatment with new surgical and noninvasive techniques," says Dr. Ducic, who believes in researching a surgeon to make sure you both share the same VIEWS, GOALS and IDEAS about what procedure is right for you. "People approach cosmetic surgery with different perceptions of beauty, so knowing that you and your surgeon agree on how to best achieve your goals is very important."
